DATA SECTION

The data that was used until now was provided by the website simplemaps.com, which contains information about latitude and longitude of most of the cities around the world. Then, I filtered that dataset to get only the data of the country that I am analyzing: Brazil, and finally fed that data into the foursquare API in order to provide the most common venues of each city, to understand what would be a good service to open when the pandemic ends.